

We just want to express our dismay at the possibility of the FCC overriding Indiana's telephone privacy protection, for we have so enjoyed the phone not ringing at inopportune times with someone wanting to sell us something. Since our law was enforced until now, we have received only a couple of solicitations for donations, whereas before, we had at as many as four calls per night - some on Sunday - with people wanting to us to buy something. We are so proud of our state government for having given us back our privacy - please don't take it away. Thank you - Harlan and Marge Kincade
